A CLEVER REWORKING OF AN ENSUITE GIVES RISE TO A STREAMLINED AND WELL-ORGANISED SPACE.

This ensuite bathroom sits on a mezzanine level of an apartment in Brisbane's heritage woolstore apartments in riverside Teneriffe. With its position retained to make use of existing plumbing, the bathroom was reconfigured into a logical sequence so that services are all placed along one wall, with a toilet and shower concealed in booths behind.

The bathroom forms a linking passage between the bedroom and dressing room. In homage to the original warehouse, Wrightson Stewart interior design firm has used both vintage and industrial features, while keeping the whole picture sleek and clean.

A vintage hospital basin has given new life with powder-coated exposed pipes. The vanity unit reads as one piece of furniture, formed of black steel and neatly inserted into the niche-like storage space of the wall. Wall lights run above the mirror and the same lights are used in vertical arrangement in the toilet and shower. Adding texture, the parchment-coloured matt wall tiles are by Vogue from Classic Ceramics, while Popham Design's 'Wink-on-one' floor tiles are key to the classic, masculine finish.
